1. A hurricane is a tropical storm in the Atlantic Ocean, a typhoon is a tropical storm in the Pacific or Indian Oceans. (The difference is in the location they are formed.)
2. They are formed in late summer because the water is warm then.
3. The winds go round the eye of the hurricane because of the rotation of the earth.
4. The hurricanes are dangerous because the winds can reach over 220 km/h.
5. The islands of the Caribbean and the coasts of Central and North America are damaged by hurricanes.
6. If global warming increases, there will be many more hurricanes each year.
